Executive summary describing the proposed certificate program*

The Graduate Certificate in English Language Acquisition & Development (ELAD) in the Department of Early, Multilingual, & Special Education prepares educators to work in PK-12 to advocate for the specific sociocultural, academic, cognitive, and linguistic needs of English language learners.

The graduate certificate program in (ELAD) will be composed of five courses targeting a specific age range (i.e., PK-12) and develop specialized knowledge in working with ELs. The program is particularly relevant to individuals who work with school-age ELs in U.S. public schools. The 12-credit program strands will provide educators with knowledge, strategies, and advocacy skills for EL populations. Hours earned for the certificate may be applied to the certificate program in specialization in ELAD (requiring an additional two 3-credit courses focusing on educational policy and advocacy for English learners) and the master's degree program in English Language Learning. Hours earned in the master's program in English Language Learning may not retroactively be used toward the certificate.

The coursework associated with this graduate certificate aligns with the learning expectations of and requirements for the ELAD endorsement through the Nevada Department of Education (See Nevada Academic Code [NAC] 391.237). Curriculum in the graduate certificate ELAD program is also centered on multiple domains of knowledge and align with the standards of the Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) for teacher preparation.

Explanation of how the proposed certificate is related to existing undergraduate and/or graduate programs, and how this certificate will provide knowledge and skills not already available to current or potential UNLV students.*

This endorsement would allow students (e.g., In-Service teachers, school administrators, adult education) who are not interested in obtaining a master's degree in the ELL program to further their professional learning around best practices for English learners via the completed certificate.

1. An Early Childhood major who is interested in supporting early home-school transitions would benefit from acquiring knowledge around second language acquisition theories and strategies and approaches to leverage home language and culture into the academic learning process.
2. A Social Work Major who supports EL immigrant families to transition to new school settings could benefit from knowledge related to ELs and the support needed for language and cultural transitions.
3. A School Psychology major who is interested in developing academic PK - 12 interventions for EL students with learning difficulties would benefit from learning about culturally relevant instructional practices and issues related to assessments practices for children whose English abilities are still developing
4. STEM majors who are offering courses in the use academic language during science instruction may benefit from the certificate by learning strategies and pedagogical approaches related to academic language development in EL students.

A statement describing the profile of potential certificate students and market demand for the certificate program, including, related occupations, job placement opportunities and market trend data when available.*

Approximately 10% of the K-12 student population are English learners (ELs) across the US. In Nevada, this number doubles to 20%. Starting in 2020, all teachers graduating from NSHE institutions are required to have an endorsement to teach ELs. In addition, all in- and pre- service teachers entering the state of Nevada will be required to take EL coursework upon license renewal until they reach the requirements for an endorsement. Therefore, the demand for this certificate in the state of Nevada will be very high.

Description of the academic unit's capability for offering this certificate; including administration of the program, faculty resources and expertise, and other required resources.*

- 3 tenure-track faculty
- 1 Assistant Professor in Residence
- Courses are currently being offered as part of M.Ed. in ELL

Description of the administration of the certificate, including:

Number of students anticipated to be enrolled and strategies for recruitment:*

Approximately 8-10 students per academic year are anticipated to enroll in the certificate program with 5-8 completing the certificate in a one-year time span (including summer term). This is an approximation based on enrollment trends in endorsement courses, particularly in those courses which are not required as part of a students' program of study (i.e. elementary education, special education, early childhood education). One such course is TESL 754. Enrollment of non-ELL Masters students (i.e. non-degree seeking, MEd in Curriculum and Instruction, MEd in Special Education) in TESL 754 averaged 11 students per course offering (10 in 2012; 6 in 2013; 20 in 2014; 9 in 2015; 11 in 2016; and 11 in 2017). Recruitment will be through the current procedures and protocols associated with the Masters and Doctoral graduate degree program programs within the department. Additional on-campus promotion of the certificate will target students in graduate programs within the College of Education and across campus (i.e. Social work, Psychology, STEM Majors). Recruitment also will be planned in conjunction with the Clark County School District targeting current teachers and administrators.

Submission of new courses (if necessary for certificate program) to the Graduate Course Review Committee.*

All courses required for the ELAD Certificate currently exist within the larger Master's Degree in English Language Learning degree curricula in the Department of Early Childhood, Multilingual, and Special Education Department. No new courses are required.

A detailed budget for the establishment and administration of proposed certificate program, including acknowledgement of what additional resources (if any) are required in order to offer proposed certificate.*

No additional resources are required.

Description of any accreditation requirements, off-campus partnerships or other details involving campus-wide and/or external partnerships or affiliations.*

No accreditation is available or required for this certificate. The English Language Learning Program is currently accredited by the Nevada State Department of Education. All courses offered in the ELAD certificate are offered in the English Language Learning accredited program.

Student Authentication – Federal guidelines require that distance education and correspondence programs utilize mechanisms that verify student identity. UNLV strives to insure that this is done with all programs, not just those delivered via distance education. Describe how this program will verify student identity. (for more information on student authentication see the UNLV Office of Online Education and WICHE)

Describe how this program will verify student identity.*

The certificate courses are taught in an online format in which we currently use anti-plagiarism software for all end-of-course final papers. We will require a mandatory face-to-face (also remote ZOOM connection when necessary) orientation to authenticate the identity of all enrolled students. These final papers, however, require students to make connections to their personal experiences (e.g., experiences teaching ELs in their classroom, experiences with ELs in their field) which are discussed within the context of theories (e.g., pedagogical, second language acquisition, assessment) learned in the ELAD courses.

Learning Outcomes*

Scholars will be able to:

1. Apply knowledge of language as a system (phonology, morphology, syntax, pragmatics, semantics) to develop learning experiences that support ELLs language and literacy development in all content areas (Language).
2. Construct supportive learning environments for ELLs through application of major theories and research related to the role of culture in learning and language acquisition (Culture).
3. Plan, implement, and manage high quality standards-based ESL and content instruction integrating evidence-based practices and technology to simultaneously develop content and language skills (Planning, Implementing, and Managing Instruction).
4. Demonstrate knowledge of the selection, use, and interpretation of appropriate cognitive, academic, and linguistic assessments for ELLs (Assessment).
5. Utilize historical perspectives, current policy, and advances in the research field to improve instructional practices and advocacy in the field of ELL education (Professionalism).
